Barometers Predict Rain For Tonight

CROPS NEARLY DESTROYED BY TORRID SPELL

Last Rain Here of Any Consequence Was March 24—Relief Prayed For.

Farmers who have watched the high temperatures and drought damage their crops, may look for a change in the weather in the next 24 hours according to amateur barometers in the down town district. These weather forecasters which have pointed persistently for weeks to hot and dry weather, gave intimations Thursday of wavering, and began to slide to a lower level and admitted "change."

The barometers, which have finally taken off their high hats, will be caressed by loving hands if they reach the low level of rain and thunder showers.

Pickaway-co has already been hit hard by the dry weather. Farmers and farm owners are depressed about the wheat and corn crops especially. According to unauthoritative opinion, there has been but one rain in Circleville since March 24. There have been showers nearby but they have passed by Circleville.

Columbus is also suffering from the dry spell. C. J. West, research director of the Ohio Farm Bureau, Inc. has said, that unless rain comes in the very near future the oats crop in central Ohio is virtually doomed.

Relief from the sweltering heat, which has been keeping the mercury in Ohio thermometers up to the 90-degree mark, was seen in the prediction of United States weather bureau officials who forecasted showers and cooler weather for tonight and tomorrow.

The report of the first serious accident as a direct result of the high temperature came from Bucyrus. Two men were injured when the automobile in which they were riding was thrown into a ditch and wrecked as heat caused a three-foot strip of brick pavement directly under the machine to explode.

The force of the blast turned the automobile over twice. E. J. Ostermeyer and Oliver Bennett were the victims. Both were seriously hurt.

West declared, however, that the wheat crop would not suffer greatly. The heat is helping the wheat to head out a little, he said.

Small fruit and berry crops will be retarded greatly, according to the research director.

The mercury touched 94 at Bucyrus yesterday afternoon and 90-degrees temperatures were reported from many sections of the state.

Dusky Gypsies Pass Through City In Bus

A large bus passing through Circleville Wednesday afternoon, stopped traffic at Main and Court-sts. for the newly painted bus was filled to the top with colored gypsies. A romantic looking gypsy was at the wheel of the car, and by his side rode a dusky maiden, dressed in the picturesque garb of the nomad. Around her throat were strands of bright colored beads. Her head was wrapped in a gay bandanna, and in her ears were gaudy pendants.

The back of the bus was filled with older men and women holding swarms of little dark youngsters, gazing salubriously out at the children of the city.

1,500 DEMS PRESENT AT BIG DINNER

Ex-Governor Cox To Be Toastmaster at Great "Victory" Dinner.

COLUMBUS, O., June 5—Apparently confident that they have reached the turning point in the political lane and that the Democratic donkey will strut home to a victory in the coming elections, 1,500 Ohio democrats will sit down to a "Victory" dinner in Memorial Hall here this evening for a pre-election "pep meeting."

James M. ("Jimmy") Cox, ex-governor and one-time presidential candidate, will act as toastmaster, and all speeches, which are expected to broadsides at the Republican party, will be broadcast over Radio Station WATU.

The advance guard of the huge Democratic army arrived in this city today and made arrangements to have large placards put up in the hall to designate the sections belonging to the delegates from the different counties. It will lend a convention touch to the meeting.

A "sold out" sign was figuratively hung out on Memorial Hall this morning. "We've no more room," said Walter F. Heer, Columbus, general chairman of the dinner.

The balcony of the large hall will be thrown open after the dinner to allow the general public to hear and applaud the speeches.

Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, is expected to fire the opening shot on the Republicans when he talks on "The Hoover Administration." George White, former national chairman, and candidate for the Ohio gubernatorial nomination this year, will follow Shouse to the speaker's platform to discuss "Our Party in 1930," and he is expected to sound an optimistic note.

Atlee Pomerene, former U. S. Senator, will tell the assembled Democrats about "True Democracy" and Martin L. Davey, ex-congressman and defeated candidate for the governorship in 1928, has chosen as his topic "Making Apparent Victory Sure."

Prizes will be given to the oldest woman and the oldest man who attend the meeting.

It was originally planned to hold the session in a downtown hotel, but even the largest hotel could not serve the number of democrats who are expected to gather around the banquet board.

Meanwhile, Henry G. Brunner, of Mansfield, is expected to confer with the state executive committee, of which he is chairman, to fill out the remainder of the democratic ticket, subject to the August primary. Announcement of candidates may be made tonight.

GRAF ARRIVES OVER SEVILLE

Flight Over Atlantic, Ship's Seventh, Requires Just 61 Hours, Eight Minutes.

SEVILLE, Spain, June 5—The Graf Zeppelin, bearing passengers and mail from Lakehurst, N. J., arrived over the local airfield at 3:20 o'clock (11:20 A.M. E.D.T.) this afternoon.

A moderate sized crowd was on hand to welcome the transatlantic traveler of the air. Officials had had plenty of time to make all preparations for a speedy landing of the airship, due to the frequent messages detailing the Graf's progress from the Portuguese coast.

Dr. Eckner, commander of the airship, piloted his charge in a wide circle over Herman Ceballo field, preparatory to landing. The Graf arrived over the local airfield just 61 hours and eight minutes after taking off from Lakehurst on Monday night.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE PRAISES PRESIDENT HOOVER

Hyde Brings Out High Points of Administration Before Republican Convention at Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 5—Asserting that "America today is fortunate to have the leadership of Herbert Hoover," Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde extolled the record of the Hoover administration before the Indiana Republican State Convention.

"No greater triumph has ever been scored in peace time than the victory which Herbert Hoover has won against panic," he said. "Our country will never know all of the conditions against which he battled, nor all of the evils which threatened us when the stock market, long overinflated, collapsed."

"Promptly the president set in motion the forces of construction and resolutely began to rebuild public confidence. The result is that unemployment which threatened to freeze the activities of the nation has proven to be little more than seasonal unemployment. There was relatively little distress."

"Thus has Herbert Hoover proven his theorem that program consists in the coordination of the great moral, social and economic forces which are always resident in a great people."

Some other accomplishments of "constructive importance" during the past 15 months were outlined by Hyde as follows:

"A definite policy of farm relief has been worked out. Settlement of the French debt has been made. Federal taxes for the past year were cut $169,000,000. Another reduction of $1,000,000,000 was made on the national debt. Law enforcement has been strengthened. An enlarged program for the development of our waterways has been initiated. Of far-reaching economic importance to agriculture as well as to business interests."

"Marked improvement in our relations with Mexico and with the Central and South American countries has been established, and an epochal step has been taken toward permanent peace through the proposed limitation of armaments treaty."

"The London Conference has a great accomplishment for peace. The proposed treaty between the three naval powers of the world will end the race for naval supremacy. There will be a vast increase in international good will."

Referring to prohibition Hyde said: "Men differ widely as to the wisdom of the eighteenth amendment. In it, some men see a salutary law imbedded in a constitution, an incentive to crime. Others see in it, better homes, better schools and a higher standard of living; the ultimate release of mankind from its greatest curse, a constantly widening horizon of liberty and opportunity. Upon this, as upon every other subject which affects our common welfare, citizens have a right to advocate whatever views they hold."

MRS. H. CLARK, G. O. P. PILLAR HEART VICTIM

COLUMBUS, O., June 5—The Republican national party today has lost one of its most ardent warriors through the death of Mrs. H. Clark, of Steubenville, Republican national committeewoman from Ohio, who dropped dead after delivering a speech here yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Clark, who was well known throughout the country as a speaker of exceptional charm and compelling vigor, had just resumed her seat after finishing her address when she slumped forward in her chair. She died before a doctor reached her side. Heart failure was the cause of death, doctors said.

60 YEARS OF AGE

The woman, who was 60 years of age, was one of the most outstanding political figures in Ohio and was the recognized leader of the Republican women of the Buckeye state. She was always in great demand at meetings of a political nature and she was attending a conference of the Buckeye Women's Republican Club at the time of her death.

She died as she lived, fighting for the Republican cause.

In 1928, Mrs. Clark espoused the campaign of Herbert Hoover for president.

WELL KNOWN HERE

Mrs. Clark was well known in this city, having delivered addresses here several times and visited here as state president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

One of her addresses here was as state committeewoman of the Republican party.

IN LIMELIGHT

Since then, Mrs. Clark has gained national prominence in Republican politics.

She had two sons, both of whom served in the World War, Hugh, Jr., was killed in a dynamite explosion at Steubenville several years ago, and Lindsey Clark is a New York broker and financial writer.

With the enlistment of her sons in the great war, Mrs. Clark became actively engaged in American Legion work, and was afterwards elected president of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion of Ohio. On two different occasions she was mentioned as a possible candidate for the national presidency of the auxiliary.

Successor to Mrs. Clark will be appointed by the national Republican committee, the candidate first being endorsed by the Republican committee of Ohio.

Mrs. Clark's body was sent to her home city, Steubenville, last night. Funeral arrangements are as yet incomplete.

J. ANDERSON'S ISLAND ROAD HOME RUINED

Axe-Grease on Stove Explodes Igniting Kitchen—Every thing Is Lost.

Nothing but ruins remained Thursday of the beautiful country residence of Joe D. Anderson of the Island road which caught fire at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday and burned completely to the ground. Damage is estimated at $15,000 with damage to the residence at $2,000 and damage to furniture and personal effects at $1,500. A furniture, clothing and everything else that was in the home at the time was destroyed with the exception of a piano which neighbors were able to remove from the parlor before the blaze had reached that far.

The house burned until late in the evening.

GREASE EXPLODES

The blaze was started when a quantity of axle-grease on the kitchen stove while he was preparing to grease the wheels of a wagon belonging to his father. The grease exploded catching fire to the kitchen and swept through the remainder of the house with amazing alarm. The walls and woodwork burned like tinder in a very few minutes all hope of extinguishing it was abandoned.

The Circleville fire department was not called because of this fire. Anderson, who was in the house at the time the conflagration started, called neighbors and effort was made to obtain water from the Scioto river with a bucket.

The house was a beautiful one and was always kept in excellent condition by Mr. Anderson. It was in this city shortly after the fire and told a friend that all he had to wear was just what he had on his back at that time. All his clothing, and that of his daughter Sarah, and son Tom, was destroyed in the fire.

Although it was reported that Anderson had insurance on his property, it is not known whether the insurance is enough to cover the loss.

S. COURT-ST JOB TO COST $4.37 FOOT

County To Pay $17,000 of Cost, Property Owners $16,422; Cost is Low.

The official assessment on abutting property owners of S. Court street in the improvement of this street is $4.37 per foot according to Bryce Briggs, county auditor.

The amount which the county has agreed to pay is $17,000 and the property owners, $16,422.04.

According to the county commissioners this is the lowest rate that a street has ever been paved in Pickaway-co and that the property owners should be well satisfied.

June 23 is the date that has been set by the commissioners for objections to this improvement.

All protests must be filed in writing in the auditor's office by 9 a. m. Monday, June 23.

C. Freice Wednesday afternoon.

A charge of breaking into a business establishment was filed against them by the Winnorr Canning Co.

WASHINGTON 'Y' NEARLY ON ROCKS

Drastic action was taken at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Washington C. H. Y.M.C.A. when a resolution was adopted dispensing of the services of the general secretary and physical director in order to cut expenses.

Unless financial aid comes to the "Y", it is feared the institution must be dispensed with.

J. ANDERSON'S ISLAND ROAD HOME RUINED

Axe-Grease on Stove Explodes Igniting Kitchen—Everything Is Lost.

Nothing but ruins remained Thursday of the beautiful country residence of Joe D. Anderson of the Island road which caught fire at 5:30 p. m. Wednesday and burned completely to the ground. Damage is estimated at $3,500 with damage to the residence at $2,000 and damage to furniture and personal effects at $1,500. All furniture, clothing and everything else that was in the home at the time was destroyed with the exception of a piano which neighbors were able to remove from the parlor before the blaze had reached that far.

The house burned until late in the evening.

GREASE EXPLODES

The blaze was started when Tom, son of Mr. Anderson, set a quantity of axle-grease on the kitchen stove while he was preparing to grease the wheels of a wagon belonging to his father. The grease exploded catching fire to the kitchen, and swept through the remainder of the house with amazing alarm. The walls and woodwork burned like tinder in a very few minutes all hope of extinguishing it was abandoned.

The Circleville fire department was not called because of this fact.

Anderson who was in the field at the time the conflagration started, called neighbors and an effort was made to obtain water from the Scioto river with which to extinguish the fire but noble efforts on the part of the neighbors was to no avail and the house burned to the ground.

The house was a beautiful one and was always kept in excellent condition by Mr. Anderson. He was in this city shortly after the fire and told a friend that all he had to wear was just what he had on his back at that time. All his clothing, and that of his daughter, Sarah, and son Tom, was destroyed in the fire.

Although it was reported Mr. Anderson had insurance on his property, it is not known whether the insurance is enough to cover the loss.

CHICAGO TONG WARFARE IS ON

Seven Shots Fired at Meeting—Chinaman Killed in Boston—Police Active.

BOSTON, June 5—Chicago's tong war had a flareback here today when seven shots were fired into the Hip Sing Tong headquarters on Hudson Street, Chinatown.

Tongmen leaped for safety from the path of the bullets, and two, Yee Sing and Wang Hong, fell down a flight of cement stairs. They were treated at City hospital for lacerations.

Among the scores of persons in the tong headquarters were several tong officials who told police that a rival tongman, from On Leong Tong headquarters, entered with a drawn pistol and began firing. He escaped as a police squad arrived.

NEW YORK, June 5—Chinatown was being strictly policed today as authorities linked the slaying of a Chinese waiter, Ah Goo, 25, with reports of a new tong war.

Western and midwestern cities and Boston, reported an undercurrent felt in Chinatowns there and police were preparing for an outbreak.

Ah Goo was reputed a member of the Hip Sing Tong. His body with six bullet wounds, was found in his residence.

INMATE OF COUNTY HOME IS CLAIMED

Daniel Partridge, aged 66, died at the Pickaway-co home in Washington-twp Wednesday. He was born in Scioto-co and as far as is known here he has no relatives.

Funeral services, with Mader and Ebert in charge, will be held Friday at 1 p. m. at Mader and Ebert funeral parlors with burial in Forest cemetery.

HAS THE LAXATIVE IN YOUR HOME—A DOCTOR'S APPROVAL?

Some things people do to help the bowels whenever any bad breath, nervousness, biliousness, or a lack of appetite, warn of constipation, really weaken these organs. Only a doctor knows what will cleanse the system without harm. That is why the laxative in your home should have the approval of a family doctor. The wonderful product, known to millions as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a family doctor's prescription for sluggish bowels. It never varies from the original prescription which Dr. Caldwell wrote thousands of times in many years of practice, and proved safe and reliable for men, women and children. It is made from herbs and other pure ingredients, so it is pleasant-tasting, and can form no habit. You can buy this popular laxative from all drug stores.

VOTE CAST FOR GUERNSEYS AT PICKAWAY FARM BUREAU

"When a calf club is started in, vote was taken in which all but Pickaway county it is going to be one registered for Guernseys. When started right, by Hectometer! Or the result was declared the man it isn't going to be started at all," was the emphatic statement made by last winter by county agricultural agent H. S. Lewis of Circleville. The writer never heard the word "hectometer" used as a by-word before, and at first it rather amused us, but we think after all that Stanley adopted a good one, one which fits him well. "Hecto" means hundred and "meter" a system of measurement; at least that is what we have decided after consulting Webster. He surely has put over his 1930 calf club by hectometer.

GUERNSEY CHOSEN

Pickaway county farmers have turned to dairying and are selling a considerable amount of cream. There are very few pure-bred dairy cattle in the county. Mr. Lewis and the officers of the Pickaway County Cooperative Cream Association are convinced that farmers of the county will profit materially by adopting a specific dairy breed, starting with a calf club. At one of their meetings a vote was taken in which all but one registered for Guernseys. When the result was declared the man voting by himself announced, "Make it unanimous, I vote for Guernseys."

The organizations sponsoring Mr. Lewis project are, in addition to the cream association, the Circleville Pumpkin Show Society, The Pomona Grange, The County Bankers Association, and the Pickaway County Farm Bureau.

The state Guernsey field-secretary was called in for consultation. He advised quality open heifers for the club workers, and that all cattle on the farms where they are to be owned be blood tested for tuberculosis.

CAUMSETT NATIVE

The first problem to solve after having decided on a breed was that of bull service. That was quickly settled in a very happy manner. Manager John S. Clark of Caumsett Farm, Long Island, New York, donated the bull Caumsett Native shown at the left of the picture on this page. This rugged youngster was delivered at Circleville early in the spring. He was photographed and a story about him was published in the local papers. Mr. Lewis could tell his prospective workers that the matter of bull service was settled, and a high class sire would be available.

Native is sired by Langwater Hardwick 141685 which is by Langwater Pharoah and out of Langwater Blanche, 125337 lbs. M., 614.1 lbs F., in class F. On test in A she has produced in 350 days 14627.4 lbs. M., and 733.8 lbs. F. Native's dam is Albamont Arethusa 111350, which now on test in class A, and in 217 days she has produced 8201.6 lbs. M. and 380.3 lbs F. Barring accidents she should produce in the year about 600 lbs. of fat.

PICKAWAY COUNTY ASSOCIATION

Mr. Clark has rendered a great service to Pickaway county in presenting this young sire. It is planned that his daughters shall be bred to a line bred May Rose bull. In fact Mr. Lewis is already advocating May Rose Guernseys for his county.

In logical sequence the next step in the program was to provide an owner for Caumsett Native, which is the Pickaway County Guernsey Association, organized on April 1 with a charter membership of eight. The officers are: president, Chas. T. May of Ashville; vice-president, Wm. Green of Kingston; and secretary-treasurer, T. M. Glick of Circleville. The first work after organization was to draft an agreement with the president under which he will grow Native to maturity and manage him for the association.

SELECTING CALVES

The next job of the association was to delegate Mr. Lewis, Ivan McKellip of the State University, and the writer to go to Wisconsin to buy 19 heifers. They were all secured in Fond-du-Lac, and adjoining counties with the help of

May Queen in June

Marian Willis of Rensselaer, Ind., crowned at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill., who was crowned Queen of the May on June 2 in a ceremony viewed by a crowd of 6,000 people.

Geo. O. Hill of Rosendale. A good part of the week was spent in making the selections, made necessary because we had the job of getting good animals with a calf club price limit.

Mr. Lewis kept the calves in the yards at Circleville for a week after they arrived and had them in nice shape when they were shown. Eleven calves six to eight months old were selected for club workers, and nine older one for adults; consequently there were separate drawings.

While at Fond-du-Lac Mr. Lewis selected a very fine grandson of Langwater Ultimas A. R., a calf about eight months old, for two farmers who purchased him together. Langwater Ultimas is by Langwater Hollister A. R. and he by Jethro's May King of Linda Vista A. R. Albamont Arethusa, which is dam of Caumsett Native, is by Don Diavolo of Linda Vista A. R., and he in turn is by Jethro's May King of Linda Vista A. R. The first two bulls to go into the county as part of this program are, therefore, bred according to the program adopted.

The members of the county association and the calf club workers will undoubtedly be the guests of the Fairfield County Guernsey Association at the time of their annual field day on August 20, when judging contests and other educational features will be a part of the program.

A Guernsey show will be held as part of the fall exhibition of the Pumpkin Show this fall. In addition to the prizes which will be arranged for from the cooperating organizations the writer has promised a show halter to the club worker which has the best fitted calf at the show.

Guernseys surely are off in Pickaway county with a good start. With good calves, carefully selected sires, and the use of both abortion and T. B. tests, developments are sure to be satisfactory. The county will eventually take its place as a Guernsey breeding center.

Modern Method Lift Them Out

CORNS

Callouses Go Too

The safest and real modern way to remove corns, root and all—out to stay is soak them every night for 3 or 4 nights in an invigorating, stimulating Radox Footbath.

Then put on modish shoes again, walk and dance with greatest comfort because there's nothing left to ache. No pain, no trouble.

Radox liberates oxygen which softens hard outer layer of corn, each night penetrating further and further through the pores, carrying the salts to actual root of corn, so loosening it that it comes right out. Nothing like healthy, free from corn feet to assure happy days! Get a package of Radox at Hamilton & Ryan's, or any drug store.—Adv.

Clever contests afforded much interest.

At the close of the program ice cream and cakes were served. Mrs. John D. Carter was chairman of refreshments. Mrs. Belle Bennett of Circleville, a member of Heber Chapter was present.

Orley Tootle of Columbus was a Williamsport visitor Tuesday.

Testimony which has been considered by the customs court of appeals classed the Nassak diamond with some of the other famous stones of history—The Great Mogul, The Nazim, The River of Light, The Regent and The Koh-I-Nor.

The first three has disappeared, possibly cut into smaller stones or hidden. The Regent is at the Louvre in Paris, formerly having belonged to the crown of France. The Koh-I-Nor may be seen at Windsor Castle in England.

According to the Nassak's story it once adorned the head of a magnificent statue of Shiva in the temple of Nassak. This was, on the banks of the Codavero in India, where thousands of natives once made pilgrimage.

This blazing diamond, which a few weeks ago was exhibited privately to the elite of Washington society, once struck terror to the superstitious worship of the Brahmins of India.

One of England's stubborn enemies, the Prince of Pashawar, according to tradition, appropriated the gem when the Mogul empire fell and the Peishwas, dominal heads of a great confederacy looted the treasures of India.

Col. J. Riggs is said to have taken the stone to England and presented it to the Marquise of Hastings. The Marquise turned the gem over to the East India company. At that time it weighed 89 1-2 carats, but had a bad shape it was recut to a three sided diamond of 78 5-8 carats. It was sold to the Marquis of Westminster and remained the property of that family until 1926.

The Nassak is now in a Fifth Avenue jewelry shop in New York awaiting a prospective purchaser.

COURT OF CUSTOMS DELVES INTO HISTORY OF DIAMOND

BY ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
WASHINGTON.—Delving into history dating back to the dawn of civilization, the U. S. court of customs and patent appeals has completed a study of the fascinating story of the famed Nassak diamond, valued at probably a half-million dollars, and within a few days will hand down a decision which will say whether this huge precious rock may enter the United States without the payment of tariff duty.

The customs appraisers at New York, when the stone was imported from England, held that duty must be paid; the lower customs court reversed this decision and the government appealed. Witnesses were divided in opinion. Some experts held that the Nassak was cut according to mathematical rules for diamonds and therefore could not be entered into the country free as a work of art, more than 100 years old.

Others insisted the pear shaped stone was one of the most remarkable works of art that had been produced by the diamond cutters of Europe out of the misty past and therefore it was entitled to entry under the special exemption to the tariff law applying to art treasures.

Testimony which has been considered by the customs court of appeals classed the Nassak diamond with some of the other famous stones of history—The Great Mogul, The Nazim, The River of Light, The Regent and The Koh-I-Nor.

WINDOWLESS BLESSING
"Old Man Sunshine," as an irreverent reporter calls him, or "The God of Life and Poesy and Light," as Byron more poetically referred to him, is airily eliminated by an electric light convention in Chicago.

"Artificial and natural illumination," says one of the delegates, "are like artificial ice and natural ice." He frankly prefers the artificial.

Architecturally, he maintains, progress in lighting is a great boon, because we shall be able to get along without windows. Thus the architectural problem will be simpler. There can be better engineering and better art, he thinks. We may have noble temples with no more external illumination than the Old Greek and Egyptian temples had.

We already have windowless buildings, in our theaters, and that works all right. It is startling, though, to think of windowless offices, buildings, factories and homes.

Health, the scientific architects insist, will not suffer. The artificial light is as wholesome as the original—more so, indeed, because it can be regulated. Ultra-violet lamps will bring health indoors without danger of sunstroke. Ventilation, too, can be handled better without windows.

All right. We're quite willing to give anything a trial. But somehow, even while contemplating all these modern scientific triumphs, we have a sneaking notion that the most up-to-date engineer or architect can't quite give us the full equivalent of a sunset or sunrise, a rainbow in the sky, the warm spring sun shining into the sunroom at home or warming one's back on the bathing beach, or the air of dawn or mountain top or forest.

SIGNS AND NUMBERS
Anyone trying to find his way about in a strange city or a strange neighborhood, is usually surprised as well as puzzled by the lack of adequate marking and numbering. At some street corners there are no signs, or the signs are illegible or pointed in the wrong direction. Many houses have no numbers at all.

Such carelessness is obviously inhospitable to strangers. More than that, it is bad business. It interferes with proper delivery of mail and merchandise. It is a drag upon the efficiency and prosperity of the community.

When names and numbers are all found duly fixed where they belong, there usually remains a curious oversight. House number are almost invariably placed where they cannot be seen at night. Why not place them where a light shines on them, or on a window where they show against the glow from behind? That would help everybody trying to find his way about for either social or business purposes.

The way the craze for miniature courses is developing, we may yet be able to play eighteen holes on a pool table.

CRIMINAL BLUNDERING
No wonder we have quantity production of criminals nowadays, when we apply a uniform rule to offenders of any particular class, however different they may be individually. No wonder our prisons are overcrowded when, as the director of public welfare in Illinois says, "two out of every five persons convicted of crime should never be incarcerated."

It is well known that "reform schools" usually serve as schools of crime, because they have so many inmates that they cannot serve their purposes even when they are under wise management.

It is equally well known that a first offender sent to the penitentiary associates with hardened criminals, a large part of the time in forced idleness, until he is likely to emerge thoroughly hardened himself and trained in criminal ways he never dreamed of before.

Intelligent students of criminology realize that there must be more discretion exercised in handling offenders, so that none shall be needlessly exposed to such contamination; also that there must be more discretion in paroling those whom there is hope of saving.

These are difficult problems, but they might be solved if society gave half as much attention to them as it gives to industrial and commercial problems.

Now the Mexicans object to restricted immigration. Same old story. They don't want to come in, but they object to being shut out.

ANOTHER ENDURANCE TEST

"SHEIK'S WIFE" BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER L.

THEY drove to the farm, opened the house, built a fire in the grate. They spent the day there, reading, talking lazily, in contentment and peace. At noon Eve made a great pan of biscuits, opened a jar of honey, broiled bacon. Nory said it was the best meal that ever he had tasted. He was so gentle, so delightful in his quiet way that she found herself wishing she'd would last a very long time—that they need not go back to Hilltop House.

But at dusk Nory said they must return. "Dramatic effect, dryad. Be just a little defiant but don't forget to blush. And if they ask where we've been be vague."

No one asked. Knowing looks greeted them, wise though tolerant smiles. Only Ken seemed oblivious of their coming.

"He didn't even know we were not here," Eve whispered.

"Fair enough. What we want is to start gossip. And I'll say that gossip is started!"

It was plain that Ken intended to linger after the crowd had gone. But there was no waiting for Eve tonight. She and Nory left first of all and instead of turning Opportunity homeward he drove away over the hill to Haverford.

They went to a little restaurant, sat a great while over ham and eggs and coffee. And Ken was waiting when they arrived at the bungalow, moody and disgruntled.

"Where the dickens have you two been?" he demanded.

"Thought you started early, Ben sitting around here an age."

An instant's hesitation. Then Eve said, nervously, "We just ran down to Haverford. It's so pretty out with the snow everywhere."

"Had ham and eggs down there," Nory explained. "And the roads are slippery."

Eve yawned, moved about carelessly, pulling the silk scarf from her head. Blushes—hesitate over explanations—well, Ken knew she had been out with Nory. He knew this at last.

Nory kept coaching Eve as if he were a producer and she a star about to make a first appearance. "Hesitate and explain a lot. Nothing like plenty of explaining to arouse suspicion. Shift your story, too, but only a little."

"Okay, fellow conspirator. But how do you know so much about all this?"

"Lord, Eve, haven't you ever seen a movie?"

"But Ken doesn't mind. No matter what I do he just doesn't seem to see."

"Oh, that's all right. Everybody else has got to talk-talk before the husband gets round to suspecting. More melodrama."

Eve twisted about, gave him a wretched little smile. "It makes me feel so cheap, Nory. Tricks and cheap, getting into this with you."

"With me, Eve?"

He regarded her whitely; she saw the pain in his eyes, felt a rush of tears to her own. "Oh, forgive me, Nory darling! I didn't mean it that way—I never did! And you so wonderful—not one like you, not ever."

"Why, it's all right, little Eve." His slow smile gathering her into understanding. But she thought he seemed weary, lonely and unhappy as he turned away.

She pointed out to him that after all Ken and Lilas had an excuse for the time they spent together.

AT THE CLIFTONA
It is the unwritten law of talking pictures that Broadway's biggest favorites will sooner or later become the favorites of America's millions everywhere.

The most recent example of this is the case of Clayton, Jackson and Durante.

Here are three geniuses of amusement who are probably more the exact type of the kind of performer Broadway breeds than any other particular group of actors. They have been treading their way forward by the night club route for seven years.

In Paramount's all-talking laugh-riot, "Roadhouse Nights," the team that Broadwayites have staved over gets its chance to do its stuff for the rib-tickling benefit of the millions who have never had the opportunity of becoming Broadwayites.

And how they do their stuff! Preview audiences in Yonkers, N. Y., "ate them up," according to press critics who were present at the preliminary showings of "Roadhouse Nights."

Clayton, Jackson and Durante are combination performers and bootleggers' henchmen in this smash-hit of opera bouffe villainy in a roadhouse-rendezvous for scrambled yeggs.

Helen Morgan and Charles Ruggles are co-featured in the romantic leads, Helen as a bootlegger's sweetheart—a girl whose man done done her wrong and Charlie is the same type that made him famous on the talking screen, the drunken reporter type of "Gentlemen of the Press."

It's all red-hot, sock 'em and rock 'em rioting, and it is coming to the Cliftona Thursday.

AT THE METROPOLITAN
In Reginald Denny's latest starring talkie "What A Man!" coming on Friday and Saturday to the Metropolitan Theatre, the leading feminine role is played by Miriam Seegar, a lovely blonde actress whose rise in Hollywood has been spectacular. She made her stage debut at the age of thirteen, and, deciding to come to New York, obtained small bits in musical productions until her big chance came. Learning that A. H. Woods, the Broadway producer, was casting for two companies of a stage play, "Crime," Miss Seegar sought work with him. He promised her a role in the Chicago production, but she was intent on going abroad with the London company. So great was her eagerness that Mr. Woods finally consented to grant her wish, and Miss Seegar remained in England almost three years, playing stage and picture roles.

In "What A Man!" Miss Seegar plays the part of Eileen Kilbourne, haughty heiress whose resentment at Denny's presence in the household as chauffeur and ex-tramp, changes to a more romantic feeling in the course of the unusual story. E. J. Rath wrote the popular novel, "The Dark Chapter," on which this amusing talkie is based. George J. Crone directed.

AT THE GRAND
Betty Compton with George Garraud and Juliette Compton appear at the Grand Theatre Thursday and Friday in a powerful drama entitled "Woman To Woman." The picture is an all-talking and tells of a man and two women, one his wife, the other his son's mother.

Paris in wartime, then London in peace, is the romance of a dancer who was celebrated for her Dance of Death, and whose love never died.

Is Chance the Dictator of Your Diet?

Learn the Fuel Requirements of Your Body and Avoid Nutritional Failure

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health
New York City.

DR. COPELAND

It has been said that the normal person, when free to choose, will select the food best suited to his needs. It is true enough that most persons will eat enough food. But whether that food is of the right kind is entirely another question. On the other hand, there are too many persons who eat too little for the body needs.

Diet is a very important thing, and you can't leave to chance, to the dictates of your appetite, or to taste just what is good for you. It is not so simple as that.

Everyone should learn how to avoid nutritional failure. There are plenty of sources from which to draw information on the subject. The libraries, the schools and the lecture room afford plenty of knowledge in nutrition.

There are four factors that should always be considered. They are the fuel requirements of the body, for which there must be fuel to produce energy; the protein intake; the mineral substances, and the need of vitamins.

A normal six-year-old boy requires a total daily average of about 1,600 calories. Calories are units indicating the energy value of food. We must have energy to run this machine—the body. Girls require a slightly lesser amount, 1,500 calories.

At ten years of age the average boy needs about 2,300 calories daily to furnish him with enough energy for his so active life. A girl at this age requires about 2,200 calories. During the next few years the girl's needs slightly exceed the boy's. At fifteen the boy's needs are again greater—3,800 calories daily, while a girl's needs are about 3,500.

The protein of milk, cereals, legumes, such as peas and beans, and other vegetables are all readily utilized and are important in the diet of every growing child. A child needs at least one quart of whole milk every day.

It is difficult to set a guide for everybody in selecting the amount of proper food elements needed. In general it has been estimated that the average adult needs proteins 113 grams, carbohydrates 500 grams, and fat 56 grams.

A vigorous, active boy puts forth an enormous amount of energy in a day. He burns up a great deal of fuel through his incessant play and muscular activity. This is true to a lesser extent of the girl.

It is necessary to include in the diet the vegetables and fruits that contain iron, lime, phosphorus and other minerals, so necessary to bone structure. These minerals also take part in the formation of many organic compounds to form the cell structure.

If you are to protect yourself and your children from those diseases which we call the deficiency diseases, if you want health, strength and a vigorous constitution to withstand the rigors of living, you will need to regulate the diet in such a way as to furnish all the food elements needed by the body in the work it must do.

WINDOWLESS BLESSING

"Old Man Sunshine," as an irreverent reporter calls him, or "The God of Life and Poesy and Light," as Byron more poetically referred to him, is airily illuminated by an electric light convention in Chicago.

"Artificial and natural illumination," says one of the delegates, "are like artificial ice and natural ice." He frankly prefers the artificial.

Architecturally, he maintains, progress in lighting is a great boon, because we shall be able to get along without windows. Thus the architectural problem will be simpler. There can be better engineering and better art, he thinks. We may have noble temples with no more external illumination than the Old Greek and Egyptian temples had.

We already have windowless buildings, in our theaters, and that works all right. It is startling, though, to think of windowless office buildings, factories and homes.

Health, the scientific architects insist, will not suffer. The artificial light is as wholesome as the original—more so, indeed, because it can be regulated. Ultra-violet lamps will bring health indoors without danger of sunstroke. Ventilation, too, can be handled better without windows.

All right. We're quite willing to give anything a trial. But somehow, even while contemplating all these modern scientific triumphs, we have a sneaking notion that the most up-to-date engineer or architect can't quite give us the full equivalent of a sunset or sunrise, a rainbow in the sky, the warm spring sun shining into the sunroom at home or warming one's back on the bathing beach, or the air of dawn or mountain top or forest.

SIGNS AND NUMBERS

Anyone trying to find his way about in a strange city or a strange neighborhood, is usually surprised as well as puzzled by the lack of adequate marking and numbering. At some street corners there are no signs, or the signs are illegible or pointed in the wrong direction. Many houses have no numbers at all.

Such carelessness is obviously inhospitable to strangers. More than that, it is bad business. It interferes with proper delivery of mail and merchandise. It is a drag upon the efficiency and prosperity of the community.

When names and numbers are all found duly fixed where they belong, there usually remains a curious oversight. House number are almost invariably placed where they cannot be seen at night. Why not place them where a light shines on them, or on a window where they show against the glow from behind? That would help everybody trying to find his way about for either social or business purposes.

The way the craze for miniature courses is developing, we may yet be able to play eighteen holes on a pool table.

CRIMINAL BLUNDERING

No wonder we have quantity production of criminals nowadays, when we apply a uniform rule to offenders of any particular class, however different they may be individually. No wonder our prisons are overcrowded when, as the director of public welfare in Illinois says, "two out of every five persons convicted of crime should never be incarcerated."

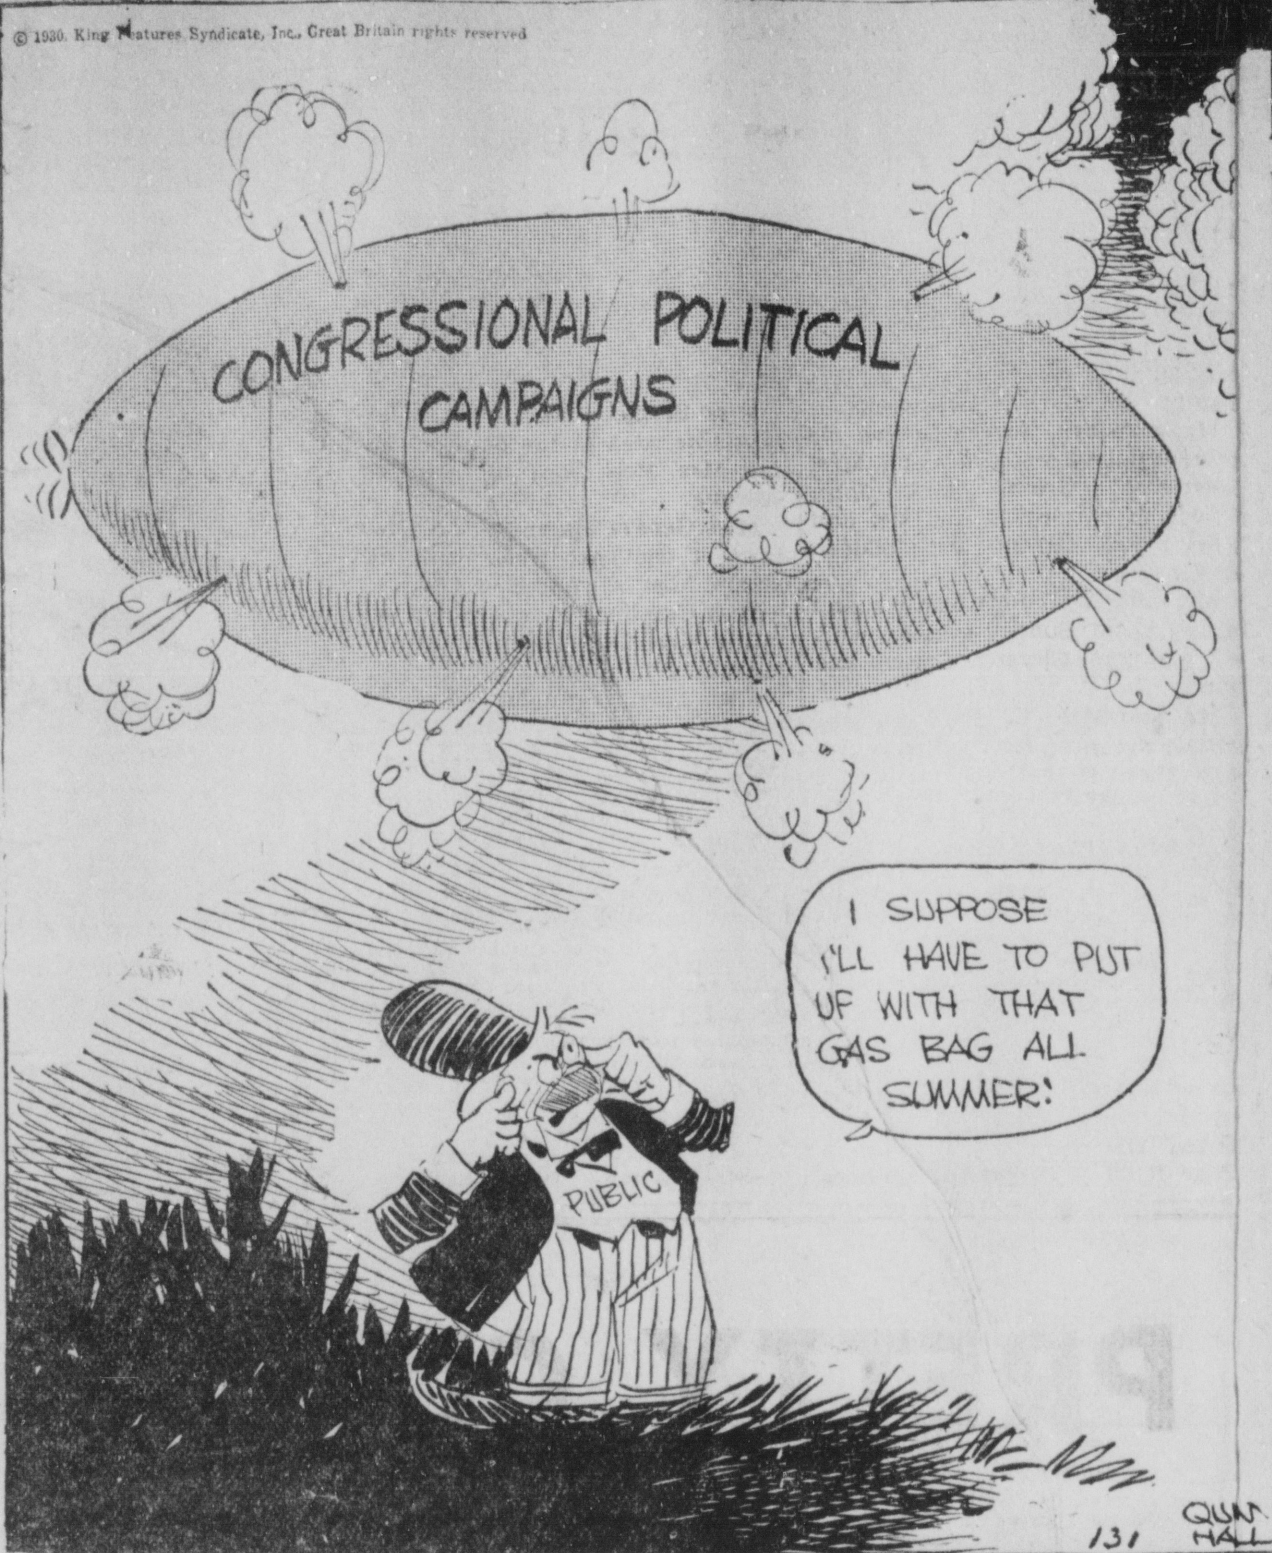

It is well known that "reform schools" usually serve as schools of crime, because they have so many inmates that they cannot serve their purposes even when they are under wise management.

It is equally well known that a first offender sent to the penitentiary associates with hardened criminals, a large part of the time in forced idleness, until he is likely to emerge thoroughly hardened himself and trained in criminal ways he never dreamed of before.

Intelligent students of criminology realize that there must be more discretion exercised in handling offenders, so that none shall be needlessly exposed to such contamination; also that there must be more discretion in paroling those whom there is hope of saving.

These are difficult problems, but they might be solved if society gave half as much attention to them as it gives to industrial and commercial problems.

ANOTHER ENDURANCE TEST

"SHEIK'S WIFE" BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER L.

THEY drove to the farm, opened the house, built a fire in the grate. They spent the day there, reading, talking lazily, in contentment and peace. At noon Eve made a great pan of biscuits, opened a jar of honey, broiled bacon. Nory said it was the best meal that ever he had tasted. He was so gentle, so delightful in his quiet way that she found herself wishing the day would last a very long time—that they need not go back to Hilltop House.

But at dusk Nory said they must return. "Dramatic effect, dryad. Be just a little defiant but don't forget to blush. And if they ask where we've been be vague."

No one asked. Knowing looks greeted them, wise though tolerant smiles. Only Ken seemed oblivious of their coming.

"He didn't even know we were not here," Eve whispered. "Fair enough. What we want is to start gossip. And I'll say that gossip is started!"

It was plain that Ken intended to linger after the crowd had gone. But there was no waiting for Eve tonight. She and Nory left first of all and instead of turning Opportunity homeward he drove away over the hill to Haverford.

They went to a little restaurant, sat a great while over ham and eggs and coffee. And Ken was waiting when they arrived at the bungalow, moody and disgruntled.

"Where the dickens have you two been?" he demanded. "Thought you started early. Been sitting around here an age."

An instant's hesitation. Then Eve said, nervously, "We just ran down to Haverford. It's so pretty out with the snow everywhere."

"Had ham and eggs down there," Nory explained. "And the roads are slippery."

Eve yawned, moved about carelessly, pulling the silk scarf from her head. Blushes—hesitate over explanations—well, Ken knew she had been out with Nory. He knew this at last.

Nory kept coaching Eve as if he were a producer and she a star about to make a first appearance.

"Hesitate and explain a lot. Nothing like plenty of explaining to arouse suspicion. Shift your body else has got to talk-talk before the husband gets round to suspecting. More melodrama."

Eve twisted about, gave him a wretched little smile. "It makes me feel so cheap, Nory. Tricky and cheap, getting into this with you."

"With me, Eve?"

He regarded her whitely; she saw the pain in his eyes, felt a rush of tears to her own. "Oh, forgive me, Nory darling! I didn't mean it that way—truly, I never did! And you so wonderful—not one like you, not ever."

"Why, it's all right, little Eve." His slow smile gathering her into understanding. But she thought he seemed weary, lonely and unhappy as he turned away.

She pointed out to him that after all Ken and Lilas had an excuse for the time they spent together.

"She poses for him and gives him expert advice about his work. He thinks it's expert advice, though it's got him into trouble already. He won't do the sketches any more."

"Don't worry about that. Ken may lose a little ground, but it's part of the treatment."

And that evening he came to the bungalow to ask Eve's help on a knotty problem in the story he was doing. She saw at once that he was setting up an excuse for their being together. A flimsy excuse.

They talked very late over Nory's story, paying no attention to Ken who read a while, fussed about his studio, finally went off yawningly to bed. If he felt a twinge of jealousy he gave no sign. Eve indeed thought he seemed bored.

"Why do you do all this for me?" she whispered to Nory. "Bother so much for me?"

His eyes were very deep holding hers, wrapping her about in warm kindness when he answered: "Your happiness, Eve. I told you this. Means a lot to me that you should be happy."

She clung to his arm when he said good-night, followed him out to the gate, stood there watching him plod away toward home.

When Elma or Chuck or Jan mentioned Nory, Eve would blush. It was not an effort, this blushing; she felt self-conscious, more than a little frightened, and so she blushed. And others, she knew, read guilt in her embarrassment.

It was not easy for her to brazen it out and she began to lean more and more upon Nory's gentle kindness. He was always about, always tactful, unassuming, always rushing forward with the little lovely attentions which could mean so much and which—as she told herself—meant nothing really beyond moves in the game they played.

Jan announced one day that she was moving into the city. "Too far from the job, living up here," she told them. "We'll take a flat and be Babbits from now on. Clay's tired of loafing; he's going into a broker's office."

This deceived no one. Jan, as everybody understood, had outgrown Bohemianism; she was getting like Elma, developing respect for the pay envelope. She would put Clay to work and see that he kept at it; forget that she had a past. It was what "free souls" did sometimes when middle age approached.

Nory gave a tea party as a farewell to the pair. Eve helped him plan a small but rather elaborate occasion with bouquets about the rooms and the heavy, old-fashioned silver brought from Stony Hall to grace the tea table. She had a moment of trepidation over this; supposing Ken should recognize it as the silver which had stood on the sideboard at Lakeview? But later she told herself there was no need to worry; Ken was too absorbed in Lilas Allan to notice the tea service.

Nory told Eve to wear a white dress. "Sweet simplicity for you, dryad. A blue sash if you have one. Too bad your hair isn't long."

"Well, of all things, Nory O'Rell! And everybody that sophisticated. Lilas Allan looking like the last wall from the Rue de la Paix—"

"That's it," he explained. "Contrast. She's ten years older than you, my dear, and looks fifteen. Twenty, maybe. Isn't there just a tiny streak of cat in that pretty body of yours?"

She thought it nonsense but rummaged about and brought out a white dress nevertheless. It was an old-fashioned dress, made with a full, gathered skirt and a rounded throat and no sleeves.

And it did look young—youth as April, Eve told herself when she took a last look at the mirror, gathered up her primly folded handkerchief, the single white rose Nory had sent.

Ken had gone to fetch Lilas so Eve went to the party alone. She was to pour and she took her place at the table smiling at everybody, oddly happy for once, not disturbed even when Lilas arrived with a great flurry and luxuriously allowed her milk coat to fall backward into Ken's arms.

Eve kept repeating "Cream? Sugar? Do have another cup, Mr. Wade."

Barton Wade stood with his elbow against the mantel, twinkling down at her, arguing with Ken about his work.

"Struck the doldrums, Wilmer? Those sketches were great stuff. King over at 'Artistry' told me they had a fine response from them. Why can't you do some for us?"

Ken was cold, very superior. "I won't be a clown. You know what I can do in a serious way." He glanced at Lilas, bridled under her approval. "Hand the morons a laugh—ah, no! I'll work for the discriminating few."

"H'm," said Wade. "Temperament! Well, get over it as soon as you can."

Ken glared in a small-boy rage. "You don't understand this. I'm all through with the buffoon stuff. Be myself or nothing."

Wade shook his head, grinning at Eve, refusing to take Ken seriously. "Get over it," he repeated. "King says they're using the last of the sketches this week. Too bad to break such a striking series."

"This week?" Ken was puzzled, alert. "But they should have ended a month ago—" He glanced at his wife, saw crimson pouring across her forehead, confusion in her eyes. And he understood. Eve had held back the drawings he gave her to mail, sent out the sketches instead.

Without another word he turned, walked stiffly away, devoted himself to Lilas the remainder of the afternoon.

Nory hovered about the tea table, bending down to Eve, saying gay, outrageous things, coaxing a smile to her shaking lips. "Smile, dryad. Not washing out on your uncle, Nory? Quick, now, a good broad grin—jolt the gossip. Say, you're a hell of a conspirator. All the same a year from Wednesday—go on, grin—"

His nonsense won her back to an appearance of lightness in the end, though her heart was frozen. Wade, she guessed, was fed up with Ken's arrogance and Wade had been his best friend. Ken seemed determined to destroy the success he had built. Darn that woman—slinky, slithering Lilas Allan, languishing there like a sketch from a French magazine, as selfish and as chill! And yet—

And yet it would be Lilas or someone else. Another woman. The trouble was inside Ken's mind, not among the women he met.

AT THE CLIFTONA

It is the unwritten law of talking pictures that Broadway's biggest favorites will sooner or later become the favorites of America's millions everywhere.

The most recent example of this is the case of Clayton, Jackson and Durante.

Here are three geniuses of amusement who are probably more the exact type of the kind of performer Broadway breeds than any other particular group of actors. They have been tramping their way forward by the night club route for seven years.

In Paramount's all-talking laugh-riot, "Roadhouse Nights," the team that Broadwayites have raved over gets its chance to do its stuff for the rib-tickling benefit of the millions who have never had the opportunity of becoming Broadwayites.

And how they do their stuff! Preview audiences in Yonkers, N. Y., "ate them up," according to press critics who were present at the preliminary showings of "Roadhouse Nights."

Clayton, Jackson and Durante are combination performers and bootleggers' henchmen in this smash-hit of opera bouffe villainy in a roadhouse-rendezvous for scrambled yeggs.

Mr. Jimmy Durante, head man of the troupe, also curls up many hundred yards of the film with his brash, irrepressible drolleries.

Helen Morgan and Charles Ruggles are co-featured in the romantic leads, Helen as a bootlegger's sweetheart—a girl whose man done done her wrong and Charlie is the same type that made him famous on the talking screen, the drunken reporter type of "Gentlemen of the Press."

It's all red-hot, sock 'em and rock 'em rioting, and it is coming to the Cliftona Thursday.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

In Reginald Denny's latest starring talkie "What A Man!" coming on Friday and Saturday to the Metropolitan Theatre, the leading feminine role is played by Miriam Seegar, a lovely blonde actress whose rise in Hollywood has been spectacular. She made her stage debut at the age of thirteen, and, deciding to come to New York, obtained small bits in musical productions until her big chance came. Learning that A. H. Woods, the Broadway producer, was casting for two companies of a stage play, "Crime," Miss Seegar sought work with him. He promised her a role in the Chicago production, but she was intent on going abroad with the London company. So great was her eagerness that Mr. Woods finally consented to grant her wish; and Miss Seegar remained in England almost three years, playing stage and picture roles.

In "What A Man!" Miss Seegar plays the part of Eileen Kilbourne, haughty heiress whose resentment at Denny's presence in the household as chauffeur and ex-tramp, changes to a more romantic feeling in the course of the unusual story. E. J. Rath wrote the popular novel, "The Dark Chapter," on which this amusing talkie is based. George J. Crone directed.

AT THE GRAND

Betty Compson with George Garraud and Juliette Compton appear at the Grand Theatre Thursday and Friday in a powerful drama entitled "Woman To Woman." The picture is an all-talkie and tells of a man and two women, one his wife, the other his son's mother.

Paris in wartime, then London in peace, is the romance of a dancer who was celebrated for her Dance of Death, and whose love never died.

Is Chance the Dictator of Your Diet?

Learn the Fuel Requirements of Your Body and Avoid Nutritional Failure

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health
New York City.

It has been said that the normal person, when free to choose, will select the food best suited to his needs. It is true enough that most persons will eat enough food. But whether that food is of the right kind is entirely another question. On the other hand, there are too many persons who eat too little for the body needs.

DR. COPELAND

There are four factors that should always be considered. They are the fuel requirements of the body, for which there must be fuel to produce energy; the protein intake; the mineral substances, and the need of vitamins.

A normal six-year-old boy requires a total daily average of about 1,600 calories. Calories are units indicating the energy-producing value of food. We must have energy to run this machine—the body. Girls require a slightly lesser amount, 1,500 calories.

At ten years of age the average boy needs about 2,300 calories daily to furnish him with enough energy for his so active life. A girl at this age requires about 2,200 calories. During the next few years the girl's needs slightly exceed the boy's. At fifteen the boy's needs are again greater—3,800 calories daily, while a girl's needs are about 3,200.

The protein of milk, cereals, legumes, such as beans and peas, and other vegetables are all readily utilized and are important in the diet of every growing child. A child needs at least one quart of whole milk every day.

It is difficult to set a guide for everybody in selecting the amount of proper food elements needed. In general it has been estimated that the average adult needs proteins 113 grams, carbohydrates 500 grams, and fat 56 grams.

A vigorous, active boy puts forth an enormous amount of energy in a day. He burns up a great deal of energy through his incessant play and muscular activity. This is true to a lesser extent of the girl.

It is necessary to include in the diet the vegetables and fruits that contain iron, lime, phosphorus and other minerals, so necessary to bone structure. These minerals also take part in the formation of many organic compounds to form the cell structure.

If you are to protect yourself and your children from those diseases which we call the deficiency diseases, if you want health, strength and a vigorous constitution to withstand the rigors of living, you will need to regulate the diet in such a way as to furnish all the food elements needed by the body in the work it must do.

GORDON TIRES DEFEAT COKE BY 5 TO 4 TALLY ANNEXING TIGHT HOLD ON LEAGUE LEAD

With an argument here, an argument there, and an argument practically everywhere, The Gordon Tires firmly imbedded themselves in first place in the recreation league by a 5 to 4 victory over the Coca Colas at Mason's Wednesday evening. To say least, the game was disappointing from a spectators stand-point, a rule a person who goes to a ball game, talks about the game after it has been completed, Wednesday sports-fans were discussing the numerous arguments and decisions which threatened at times to cause either one or the other to remove their legs from the playing field.

HARD FOUGHT
The game was hard fought from beginning to end. The Coca Colas having an early lead only to lose the final stages of the contest. The defeat eliminates the Coca Colas from a chance to win the championship in the first round of the season. The Gordon Tires, led by Ward's team, gave a full game and the Wardmen defeat the Coca Colas. The game was played at Mason's field.

Practically every run scored by the team can be accredited directly or indirectly to an error. The Gordon's were guilty of two miscues, but passed in the opening game gave two counters. The pop-shop had seven errors and at least seven can be pointed to in the Gordon scoring.

The Coca Colas outthit the Gordons against 6 but when hits and runs meant runs they just were forthcoming. The Coca Colas chased two runners into the plate in the opening and came back with one in the second. The Tires led one in the second session tied the count with a pair in the fifth.

PICKENS SCORES
Coca Colas scored a run to break tie in the seventh but Gordons can't be denied and with a bad throw to the plate with a runner on third, the Gordons led their winning marker. The game was on third base and it seemed to have any inclination to home with two out on a hard Cuzzy Dumm but when the infielders pegged the ball hit in front of him and ended over his head, Pickens led over the platter for what was to be the winning marker. Bob Maloney hurled good ball the Coca Colas granting the only five hits. He fanned and walked but two. Puddin' for the Gordons was hit in, as 16 hits in the box score show, but he fanned seven each one coming with men on the paths. He walked three, Turk Baucher, reliable sacker, led the hitters on both sides with three safe blows in trips to the plate. He also led a mighty sweet game on first sack, saving his infielders errors several times by making pretty stabs of poor throws.

"ROBBIE" DOES WELL
Robinson caught for the Woodmen.

Two fast and furious and interesting "rec" ball games can be expected by the fans tonight. At the Utilities park the Independent Grocers and C. C. of A. Tangle and surely promises to be a hot contest, as these papers have settled down the past weeks and are playing good ball. Beechey will probably pitch the straw men. Doggy Ward's aggression will attempt to pile up percentage by downing the Independent Woodmen. This also promises to be interesting.

RAJAH IS REWARDED

Rogers Hornsby, Cubs' crippled star, hobbled out on his crutches just before the Cubs-St. Louis game at Chicago May 31 to receive $1,000 in gold and a medal as his reward for distinguishing himself as the most valuable player to his team in the National League last year. The Rajah was able to smile as he took the bag of gold from John Heydler, president of the league, despite the fact that he broke his ankle in Friday's game.

PETTIT-SINCLAIR'S DEFEAT BROTHERHOOD TEAM, 4 TO 3

Pettit-Sinclair's came back to the breeze. Life Wednesday evening at Utilities field to defeat the Lutheran Brotherhood in another upset of the recreation ball season. The score was 4-3 and the game was fast and well played from start to finish.

The Brotherhood was fresh from a neat defeat of the Coca Colas and this might have had a lot to do with the game as over-confidence has caused the downfall of many a good ball team. Confident or non-confident, the Lutherans started the ball rolling when they scored one marker in their half of the third frame. The tire-oil men came back in their part to score two tallies. Ed. Sensenbrenner and his gang scored two more in the fourth frame to hold a short lead of 3-2. Then the Pettit-Sinclair lads chalked up two in their half of the fifth and scoring for the evening was at an abrupt finish. Eddie Watson hurled mighty nice ball for the winner, and when a hit meant a run, he just wouldn't permit it. He granted only nine hits and kept them well scattered. He struck out one batter and walked a pair. John Walters, for the losers, gave 11 bingles, walked three and forced one man to fan.

Stein, playing right field for the winners, led the hitters with three bingles in five trips to the rubber. John Rhoades and Walters each hit safely twice for the Lutherans.

BROOKLYN, LEAGUE LEADERS, HAVE EIGHT ERRORS IN TILT

NEW YORK, June 5—Those batters in arithmetical progression (and aren't we all) were expecting the Brooklyn Robins today to tie the modern record for errors in one game by one club.

On Tuesday the Robins misused four times. Yesterday they committed eight bobbles. Today, the staunch believers say, the Robins will err an even dozen times to place their name alongside the Tigers of 1901 and the White Sox of 1903.

Those eight errors yesterday cost seven runs, which coupled with five legitimate ones gave the Pirates a 12 to 6 victory. Pittsburgh, led by the zealous Engle, tried to match Brooklyn error for error but had to be content with five—four by Engle.

The crippled Cubs swung their crutches with enough vigor to pound out 20 hits for an 18 to 10 victory over the Braves. Cuvier had a perfect day at bat with a homer, a double, and three singles. Walter Berger smacked his fifteen-th of the year.

Scoring six runs in the first inning, the Giants were never headed. They whipped the Reds, 8 to 5. Donohue, recently acquired from the Redlegs, was the winning pitcher.

Ray Bengtson limited the Cards to four hits as the Phillies won 2 to 1. Hafev hit a homer for St. Louis' only score.

Ruth hit number 18 as the Yankees bowed to the White Sox 7 and 8. Johnny Kerr's homer in the tenth was the deciding blow of the game. Philadelphia made it two straight over the Browns, winning 4 to 3. Sam Gray, one time ace of the Brownies' staff, but who hasn't won a game this season was the losing pitcher. He was opposed by Earnshaw.

Big Ed Morris outlasted Willis Hudlin in a ten inning battle and The Red Sox tripped Cleveland 5 and 4. Scarrity's single scoring Reeves from second ended the game.

Washington blasted across three runs in the tenth inning to humble the Tigers, 11 to 8. The Tigers fought an uphill battle all the way, overcoming a six run lead to tie the score in the ninth. Mark Koenig, acquired last week from the Yankees, made his debut at short for the Tigers.

Relief from Curse of Constipation
A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing a dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 at 25c at the nearest Rexall Store, Hamilton & Ryan.—Adv.

Here's our Answer to Question

"What Mileage will my Tire Dollars buy?"

16,000 MILES over all kinds of roads . . . and sidewalls are still amazingly smooth and free of cracks and age marks. Never were tires so age-free as Silvertowns, due to their special, long-lived, long-wear tread and sidewall rubber compound.

NO SIGNS HERE of cupping or uneven wear! Silvertowns have a dense, tough tread that wears down slowly and evenly. Water-curing makes the last bit of tread rubber wear as slowly as the first, makes the tire tough clear through.

SEE THAT EDGE? Sharp and clean, even after enough service to satisfy most any tire buyer. No question here of traction or protection against skidding. That's why the Silvertown tread is admitted to be the finest tread pattern in the field.

That Is Different

GAS

Most any gas offered for sale today, will operate your motor . . . But there is ONE gasoline that will operate the same motor far more economically than others, that is CRYSTAL MIST. There IS a difference and this difference will be apparent the moment you try it . . . Drive in and let us fill your tank with the gas that makes driving a pleasure.

Three good oils that make motoring safe.

Publicly established Mileage Records show you what Silvertowns can do on your car

LOOK at the picture above . . . study the captions just below it. See the condition of this Silvertown after 16,000 grueling miles.

There's the answer to your question! There's the proof of what Silvertowns can do!

This Silvertown is one of the 62 that toured the country with the Silver Fleet last year. It was photographed after 16,238 punishing miles.

And look at it! Know any other tire that looks as good after that much service?

We have the blood brothers of this tire in stock right now. Casings identical to it in ability to stand up under terrific punishment. Come in . . . see them . . . price them.

They cost less than you think . . . and, mile for mile, are the lowest-priced tires you can buy. Yes, we have your size!
